Abstract

The present invention relates generally to a method and system for performing operations management in an environment of resources. More particularly, the present invention performs operations management by representing the resources with integrated circuits that find relations among the resources and combine related resources to form new resources.

15

20

25

30